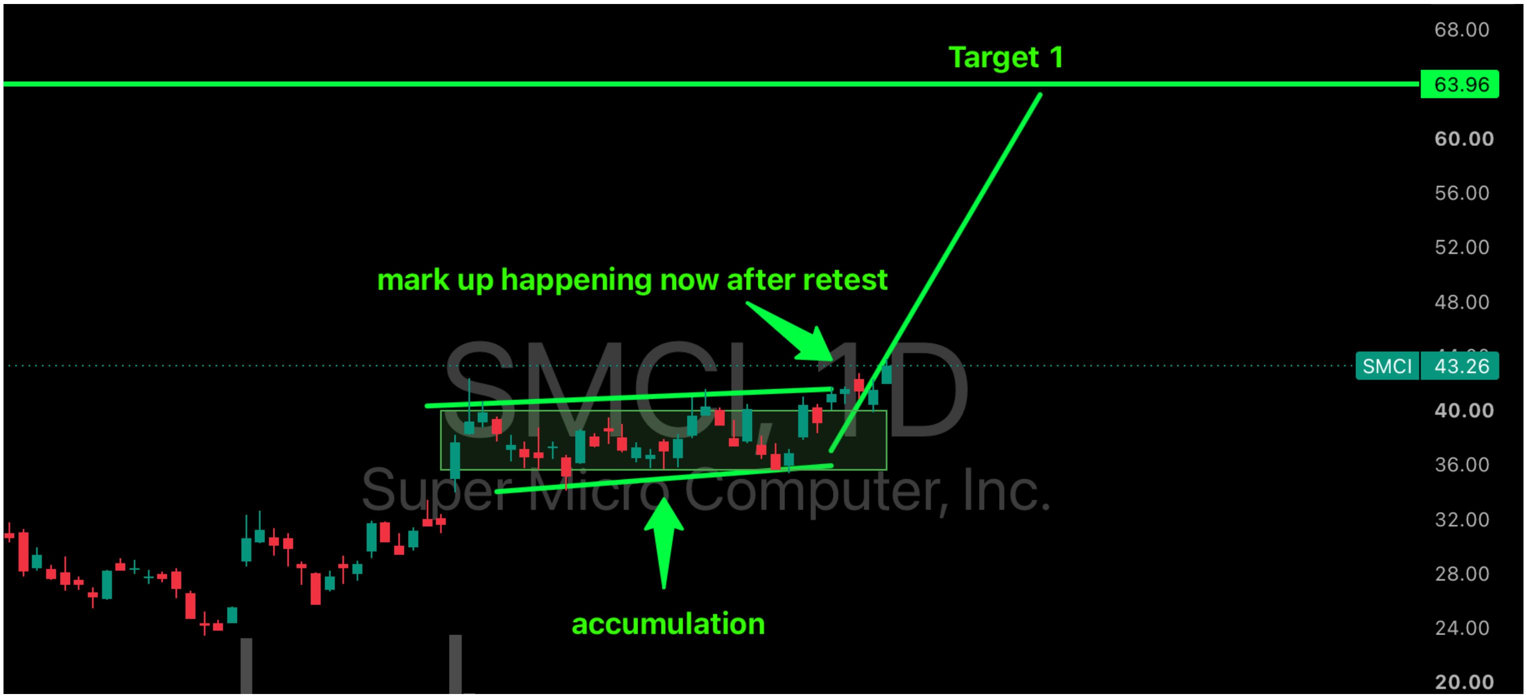
Week of September 28th Setup



n this week's Chart of the Week, we take a look at Super Micro Computer ($SMCI), which appears to be moving out of a multi-month accumulation range after retesting the breakout area around 40–41. Price is now pushing higher from that retest, and as long as the former range holds as support, the setup favors continued markup toward the first major target near $63.96. A move back below roughly 36–38 would weaken the breakout structure.

The bigger story is that Supermicro is moving beyond simply selling servers and toward supplying entire AI data-center systems — racks, networking, power and direct liquid cooling. It is already shipping NVIDIA Vera Rubin NVL72 racks, which gives SMCI direct exposure to the next generation of AI infrastructure spending as GPU density and cooling requirements keep rising.

Get Free Access With Link Below

Thanks for reading, stay blessed.

[Subscribe here to receive exact entries, exits and live chat]